1. Secretaries' foreword

The Cabinet Office and Premier's Department are committed to creating a more inclusive and diverse workforce within the NSW public sector. Currently, people with disability are under-represented. The Disability Inclusion Action Plan (DIAP) aims to address this by implementing strategies and delivering initiatives that make our workplace safe, inclusive and accessible for all.

The NSW Government has committed to improving the recruitment and retention of its workforce. Its target is for people with disability to represent 5.6% of the total workforce by June 2026. The Cabinet Office and Premier's Department achieved 7.3% of roles being held by people with disability in 2024. While this demonstrates our progress and dedication, the DIAP is designed to deepen our commitment to further representation across the Departments.

This commitment goes beyond providing employment opportunities for individuals with disability. It is about strengthening our workforce with diverse perspectives and lived experiences, which are essential for driving better outcomes. By deepening the representation of people with disability across NSW Government, we enhance our knowledge and insights, enabling us to develop more inclusive, effective policies. This vision is key to delivering tangible, improved outcomes for the people of NSW.

We must approach challenges with innovation and creativity, leading with self-awareness and empathy. Accessibility across our functions, and within our roles, is fundamental when delivering these outcomes.

By embedding universal design principles, leveraging new technologies to break down barriers, and proactively creating inclusive spaces, we move toward making our workplaces safe and welcoming for everyone.

The journey towards greater inclusion will take all of us, working together to deliver and lead policy, strategy and integrity from the heart of government. By embracing this action plan and working on delivering its principles, we ensure that our workforce reflects the diversity of the communities that we serve.

Australian Disability Network (AusDN) is a peak body in Australia that helps employers build their confidence and capability to welcome and include people with disability as employees and customers.

The Departments are The Cabinet Office (TCO) and Premier's Department (PD).

Dignified Access Review is a process undertaken by an independent third party to provide employers with an overview of the accessibility of their workplace, to help them comply with the law.

Disability Inclusion Action Plan (DIAP) is a strategic framework implemented by organisations or government agencies to promote the inclusion, participation and accessibility of people with disability. Public sector agencies, local governments and some non-government organisations have a legal obligation to develop a plan under the Disability Inclusion Act 2014.

Disability Review Steering Committee is co-chaired by the Public Service Commissioner and the Secretary of the Department of Education. It consists of senior executives and a senior leader with disability from each NSW Government portfolio. The committee oversees the implementation of the Disability Priority Review recommendations and other NSW Government priorities and commitments that relate to disability inclusion.

Communities and Justice (DCJ) to support the development of DIAPs.

NSW Disability Inclusion Plan 2021–2025 (DIP)

is a central framework launched by DCJ in 2019 to strengthen the state's accessibility framework. It outlines work underway to improve outcomes for people with disability. All local councils and NSW Government portfolios have DIAPs, which put the principles of the DIP into practice.

People Matter Employee Survey (PMES) is the NSW public sector's annual employee opinion survey, which asks employees about their experience and perceptions of a range of workplace issues and practices, including management and leadership, service delivery, employee engagement, diversity and inclusion, public sector values, and unacceptable conduct. The survey is conducted annually by the Premier's Department with assistance from NSW public sector agencies and service providers.

Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of People with Disability is an independent inquiry established in 2019 to investigate and address systemic issues of violence, abuse, neglect and exploitation of people with disability, and to recommend reforms to prevent future harm.

World Class Public Service Disability Priority Review is an independent report delivered in 2022 that aimed to understand challenges and identify solutions to improve disability employment in the NSW public sector.

3. Introduction

3.1 About the Departments

The Cabinet Office (TCO) and Premier's Department (PD), collectively referred to as 'the Departments', are strong central agencies essential to leading, coordinating and driving whole-of-government policy and delivery, to address the challenges NSW faces today and into the future.

Our purposes – Leading policy, strategy and integrity at the heart of government for TCO, and Connecting to deliver from the heart of government for PD – are achieved by first ensuring that every employee feels safe, valued and respected. As such, the Departments remain committed to fostering inclusive and accessible workplace environments, where all staff are supported to meaningfully contribute and engage fully in their professional roles.

3.2 Our vision

Our vision is to create a culture of inclusion where the barriers to access and opportunity are proactively dismantled and where the rights and voices of people with disability are respected. We want the Departments to have a reputation as accessible and inclusive employers, where staff are supported to reach their full potential.

3.3 Our approach

The NSW Disability Inclusion Action Plan Guidelines formed the basis for the key focus areas in this plan, guiding our strategy to address issues through engagement, planning and co-design of solutions.

Following this framework, we conducted several consultation sessions to shape the development of our DIAP. Our primary consultation channel was the Accessibility, Health and Wellbeing Group, a workstream within our Diversity and Inclusion Network (DAIN), ensuring that staff with lived experience of disability were the main source of feedback. Additional sessions were held with staff across the wider department, and 2 sessions were conducted with key stakeholders who will assist in delivering the action plan. An anonymous online survey was also available during the consultation period. Three drafting rounds were completed to secure support and commitment from our consultation groups, with assistance from the Australian Disability Network (AusDN).

Importantly, all our existing disability inclusion commitments, including actions arising from previous reviews and accessibility audits (such as the World Class Public Service Disability Review; and the Recruitment Review and Dignified Access Review completed by AusDN) have been incorporated into the DIAP to ensure our ongoing commitment and focus.

3.4 Intersectionality

Incorporating intersectionality into the DIAP is crucial to fostering an inclusive environment that benefits all individuals, regardless of their background. Universal design principles promote accessibility and usability for everyone, ensuring that spaces, services and opportunities are designed with diverse needs in mind. This DIAP aligns with existing departmental plans, such as the Aboriginal Employment Action Plan and the Work Health and Safety Targets, which emphasise creating psychologically safe workplaces, implementing inclusive recruitment and retention practices, and uplifting capability across the Departments through relevant training and support. They also seek to address systemic issues embedded in organisational culture through proactive responses. By prioritising intersectionality and universal design, we can enhance equity and participation for people with disability, while supporting the broader goals of diversity and inclusion across the Departments.

4. Understanding disability inclusion

4.1 Definition of disability

The NSW Public Sector embraces the social model of disability, which views societal barriers, rather than individual impairments, as the primary obstacles to equal participation.

‘Disability’ includes long-term physical, mental health, intellectual, neurological or sensory differences which, in interaction with various attitudinal and environmental barriers, may hinder full and effective participation in society on an equal basis with others.

This social model contrasts with the medical model of disability, which perceives disability as an individual deficit or deviation from the ‘norm’. The inherent power dynamics of the medical model are often referred to as ableism, focusing on what a person cannot do or be. In legal contexts, the term ‘disability’ has specific meanings under the Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth) (section 4) and the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) (sections 4 and 49A). While the definitions are more consistent with the medical model, they are utilised under the Act(s) to ensure protection against discrimination for people with disability. Adopting a social model of disability across the sector will not undermine or affect the rights of people with disability as established by legislation.

The Australian Bureau of Statistics (ABS) also uses a medical definition. We will continue to benchmark our People Matter Employee Survey (PMES) against ABS data for consistency and alignment with other jurisdictions.

4.2 Current state of disability in Australia

In NSW, disabilities vary widely in type and severity. Nearly one in 6 residents live with some form of disability, and approximately one in 20 require assistance due to their disability. (ABS, 2022). Disability can be visible or invisible, ongoing or episodic, and may remain stable or deteriorate over time. This broad spectrum highlights the varied experiences and needs of individuals with disabilities in the community.

In 2017, the NSW Government aimed to increase the proportion of people with disability employed in the public sector to 5.6% under election commitment 239 (E239). At that time, the then Department of Premier and Cabinet reported that 3.1% of its employees identified as a person with disability. According to our 2024 workforce diversity data, 4.8% of staff in TCO and 8.1% in PD now identify as a person with disability (the combined figure is 7.3%).

Despite the Departments reaching the 5.6% target, people with disability continue to face barriers to further employment opportunities for roles at higher grades, and physical barriers in the workplace. They are also more likely to experience discrimination and poor mental health. Our DIAP is designed to help the Departments overcome these barriers and create an environment where people with disability feel safe, respected and valued. By doing so, we aim to become an employer of choice and increase the recruitment and retention of people with disability.

4.3 The workplace experience of staff with disability

Understanding the workplace experiences of staff with disability is fundamental in creating an inclusive and supportive environment. By distributing anonymous surveys such as the PMES, conducting accessibility audits, providing disability awareness training and consulting with employee reference groups, we can gain valuable insights into the experiences of people with disability within TCO and PD.

4.4 Accessibility audit

In July 2023, People, Culture & Talent (PC&T) engaged AusDN to conduct a Dignified Access Review of one of our workplaces. The review aimed to assess the current state of accessibility of our work premises and propose necessary improvements to remove potential barriers, ensure alignment with accessibility standards and work health and safety legislation, and create a dignified and inclusive experience for people using the premises.

The AusDN consultant reviewed physical spaces (including the entrances, reception/foyer, lifts, doors, meeting rooms, car park, kitchen and office spaces used by staff, as well as workplace policies (including work health and safety, first aid, and evacuation policies).

The final report, received in September 2023, provided comprehensive recommendations to address identified barriers. These were presented to the TCO/PD Executive in November 2023 and subsequently approved. Since then, several recommendations have been implemented or are in progress, including the installation of hearing augmentation in meeting rooms. Any outstanding actions have been incorporated into the DIAP to ensure their ongoing prioritisation.

4.1.1 The People Matter Employee Survey

Annual PMES results enable us to measure the success of our DIAP and understand the unique experiences of employees with disability within the workplace.* We are committed to ensuring there is better representation for people with disability and will work together to create psychologically safe spaces to encourage greater contribution so their voice can be captured.

The table below identifies the overall employee engagement score in 2024 and the percentage of favourable scores for key survey topics for all survey respondents compared with respondents who identify as a person with disability.

PMES Indicator	Report total	People with disability
Employee engagement score	65%	66%
Wellbeing	67%	61%
Role clarity and support	66%	60%
Inclusion and diversity	69%	58%
Teamwork and collaboration	70%	71%
Learning and development	60%	48%
Senior executives	60%	58%
Communication and change management	56%	50%
Employee voice	70%	67%

4.1.2 The Accessibility, Health and Wellbeing Group

Employee reference groups and networks provide a platform for sharing experiences, offering support and advocating for necessary changes.

The Accessibility, Health and Wellbeing Group is a workstream within DAIN. This group offers a safe and supportive community for people with disability or health conditions, and their allies. It champions and advocates for global accessibility, ensuring all staff can contribute and engage meaningfully. Committed to an accessibility-first approach, the workstream aims to counter the historical tendency of treating accessibility as an afterthought.

The Accessibility, Health and Wellbeing Group was also our primary consultation channel in the development of the DIAP to ensure that staff with lived experience of disability were the main source of feedback.

* For simplicity, we have combined the data for both Departments here; however, we will extract and report on the data separately to ensure clarity and accuracy in relation to each department's performance.

5. Legislative and policy context

5.1 Policy framework

Launched in 2021 by the Department of Communities and Justice (DCJ), the NSW Disability Inclusion Plan 2021–2025 (DIP) establishes a comprehensive policy framework that outlines key priorities and strategies to advance disability inclusion throughout the state. This plan is aligned with Australia's Disability Strategy and the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, ensuring a cohesive approach to promoting accessibility, equality and participation for people with disability.

The DIP sets out 4 focus areas for improving the lives of people with disability:

1. Developing positive community attitudes and behaviours
2. Creating liveable communities
3. Supporting access to meaningful employment
4. Improving access to mainstream services through better systems and processes.

The TCO/PD DIAP aligns with these principles, which provide the blueprint for increasing the social and economic participation of people with disability across the state.

5.2 Legislative framework

The Disability Inclusion Act 2014 (NSW) serves as the primary legislative framework, requiring public authorities, including TCO and PD, to develop, implement and evaluate DIAPs that embody the principles of disability inclusion. These plans must outline specific strategies to enhance accessibility, equality and participation for people with disability, ensuring their full involvement in both community and workplace settings.

Additionally, the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW), the Disability Discrimination Act 1992 (Cth), and the Work Health and Safety Act 2011 (NSW) play crucial roles in promoting disability inclusion. These laws provide legal protections against discrimination and advocate for safe and inclusive environments for people with disability.

The Anti-Discrimination Act and the Disability Discrimination Act specifically prohibit discrimination based on disability in areas such as employment and access to services. They mandate reasonable adjustments to ensure equal participation and access for people with disability.

Similarly, employers must ensure the health and safety of all employees, including those with disability, under the Work Health and Safety Act. They are required to identify and mitigate workplace health and safety risks and remove systemic barriers to enable equal participation for all employees.

5.3 Disability Priority Review 2022

Despite enhancements to the state's accessibility and inclusion framework through legislation, and national and state strategies, people with disability remain under-represented in the NSW public sector. To understand the reasons behind this, the NSW Government commissioned a review of disability inclusion in 2022.

The final report from this review presented 8 recommendations aimed at improving disability inclusion outcomes across the sector. Each recommendation was assigned to a lead department, chosen based on demonstrated best practices or specific capabilities to lead the initiative. Premier's Department is the sector lead for recommendation 1: A consistent definition of disability. These 8 recommendations have been integrated into the TCO/PD DIAP and will be progressively implemented as they are finalised by the respective lead agencies (see Appendix A).

5.4 Disability Royal Commission

The Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of People with Disability was established in April 2019 in response to community concern about reports of violence against, and the neglect, abuse and exploitation of people with disability.

The final report was released on 29 September 2023 and makes 222 recommendations that aim to strengthen the rights and inclusion of people with disability.

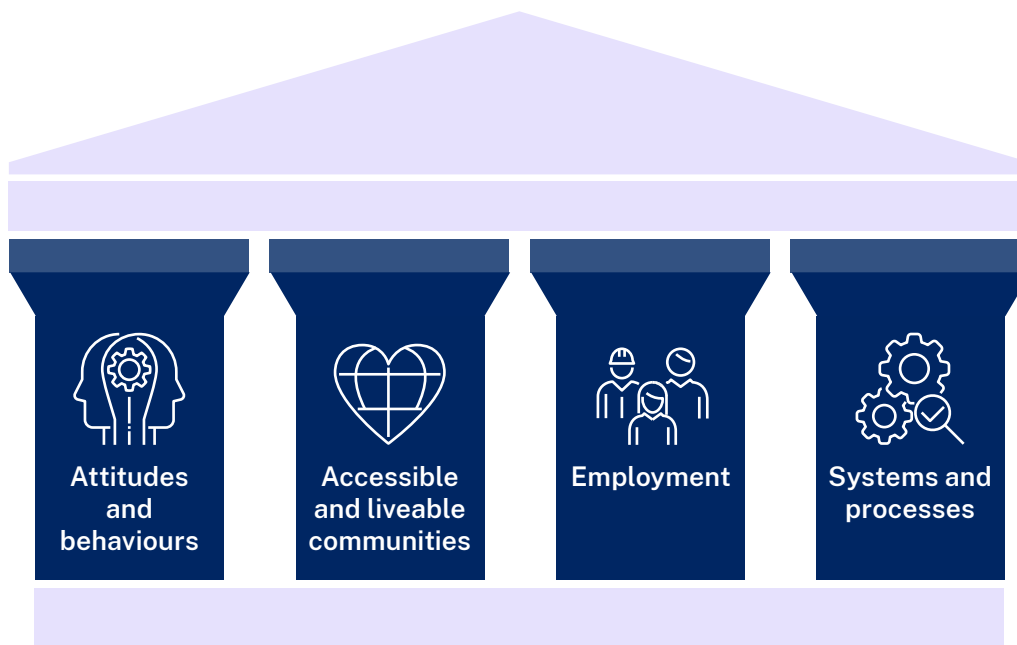

On 31 July 2024, the NSW Government responded to the final report of the Disability Royal Commission. The response sets out a broad disability reform agenda for NSW, led by DCJ.

The Departments will cooperate with DCJ to deliver the reforms, and the TCO/PD DIAP will evolve to incorporate any relevant actions.

7. Monitoring and evaluation

To effectively assess progress, identify areas for improvement and ensure the plan's effectiveness in meeting its objectives, we will implement a robust governance structure organised into the following key components:

7.1 Roles and responsibilities

7.1.1 People, Culture & Talent Inclusion and Wellbeing Team

This team will:

- draft and develop the DIAP in consultation with relevant stakeholders and AusDN
- facilitate the implementation of the plan by supporting the relevant action owners
- coordinate the reporting requirements and oversee the overall progress of the DIAP
- ensure the ongoing relevance of the DIAP and update it as required in line with current policies and legislation
- advocate for staff with disability and empower them to participate in the workplace in a meaningful way
- review resources and training modules and monitor staff uptake.

7.1.2 The Secretaries

- The Secretaries are accountable for the success of the DIAP as mandated by relevant legislation and will create a top-down culture of equality and inclusion.

7.1.3 Senior leaders/action owners

- Senior leaders are accountable for the delivery of actions relevant to their business area. They will nominate a champion from their branch to support the implementation.

7.1.4 DIAP champions

- A champion from each branch will be appointed to monitor and report on the progress of the actions relevant to their business area.

7.2 Reporting and review mechanisms

Reporting and review mechanisms will include:

- monthly reports to the TCO/PD Executive on workforce representation and disability awareness training participation, in the form of a dashboard
- nominating action owners (senior leaders that have decision-making authority, ultimately accountable for the delivery of relevant actions) and champions (responsible for monitoring and reporting on the relevant actions) for every branch. This will facilitate wider representation and engagement across the Departments

- twice-yearly reports to the TCO/PD Executive, Disability Review Steering Committee and Accessibility, Health and Wellbeing Group on DIAP progress, with a focus on transparency and inclusion. Data will be collected in a spreadsheet maintained by the Inclusion and Wellbeing team and distributed to the relevant champions prior to each reporting period. It will then be collated, analysed and presented in a format appropriate for each stakeholder group
- annual analysis of PMES results, focusing on the inclusion, wellbeing and engagement of employees with disability
- annual reporting on DIAP progress to the relevant minister and DCJ, in line with statutory requirements.

Data from the above processes will assist in assessing DIAP outcomes and refining actions based on measurable results.

7.3 Ongoing improvement

We will establish a feedback loop and consultation protocol to ensure the voices of people with lived experience inform DIAP improvements. By actively seeking and responding to the feedback received from employees, managers and external partners, the Departments will foster a culture of learning and adaptation.

7.4 Stakeholder engagement and communication

We will maintain open communication channels to ensure transparency and collaboration with stakeholders including staff, management, peak bodies and external partners.

The successful embedding of disability inclusion principles and practices across our organisations requires collaboration across branches, teams, Departments and the sector.
